

I am a mother living with cancer

I am a mother living with cancer. As a mother you are meant to be the strong one, the smart one, the one who will care, love, teach, support, uplift, guide, comfort, to name a few. No matter what a mother is feeling or experiencing she is there for her children.

I am a mother living with cancer how do I feel?

I feel happy to know I am a mother who is strong, who is smart and I support my daughter Rhea no matter what I am feeling or experiencing.

I am a mother living with cancer. I am sad, I am scared, I shed tears within, but I will support my daughter no matter what I am feeling or experiencing.

I am a mother living with cancer. I wake up every day feeling happy knowing I am here for another day to be there for my daughter no matter what I am feeling or experiencing.

I am a mother living with cancer. I sometimes feel sick, have pain, get emotional but I am here for my daughter no matter what I am feeling or experiencing.

I am a mother with cancer. I want to see my daughter graduate, get her dream job, buy her first home, marry the love of her life, have children and be a mother like myself to pass on the continued love of family passed down from generations.

I am a mother living with cancer. I know that I can defeat this! I have to for my daughter, the most important thing in my life. I dislike the words "living with cancer".

I am a mother who has been reborn! My eyes and heart are wide open and I now truly understand the meaning of life!
